1. How does your faith influence the way you resolve tensions, such as balancing rest and productivity or generosity and financial security?
2. James points out that God chooses the poor to be rich in faith. How can this perspective change the way we treat others, regardless of their social or economic status?
3. How do you reconcile James' teaching that faith without works is dead with Paul's teaching that salvation is by grace through faith alone?
4. Read James 2:21-25
James uses Abraham and Rahab as examples of faith in action. Who in your life models this type of faith for you, and what have you learned from them?
5. Do you feel that your faith is alive and active, or are there areas where it feels stagnant? What might God be calling you to change?
6. James challenges readers to demonstrate their faith through their actions. What are some practical ways you can live out your faith this week?
